Dear colleagues,

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, we had to postpone our Annual Meeting last year.

We are now privileged to cordially invite you to the joint DGI/DZIF Annual Meeting in Stuttgart 1 – 3 June 2022!

The structure of this year's scientific sessions will be provided by our four grand challenges of infection research:

- Tropical and Emerging Infections
- Chronic Infections
- Immune Prevention and Therapy
- Antimicrobial Resistance

We hope to highlight existing parallels and stimulate further synergy and interactions. In the successive poster sessions, each of these grand challenge areas will present itself to the conference participants, requesting feedback and exchange.

We are looking forward to welcome you to Stuttgart.

Best regards

Get-together

We look forward to inviting all participants to a get-together with the Academic Orchestra of the University of Tübingen after the sessions on Wednesday evening. At the end of the day, food and drinks will be offered and will provide a cozy setting for further discussions and networking with colleagues.

The Academic Orchestra of the University of Tübingen

The roots of the Academic Orchestra go back to the "Academic Music Association", which was founded by Friedrich Silcher, Tübingen's first university music director. Around 70 participants, mostly students from the University of Tübingen, meet weekly to rehearse and perform symphonic programs from the baroque to the modern. In recent years, the ensemble has dedicated itself to works by Bach, Beethoven, Bruckner, Mahler, Mozart, Saint-Saens, Strauss and Tchaikovsky, among others. In 2013, the violin concerto by the American composer Randall Svane was premiered seven times in Germany and the USA. Further concert tours took the musicians to Austria, France, Denmark and Italy. The orchestra is supported by members of the Stuttgart Philharmonic, who pass on their professional experience in intensive voice rehearsals.
